HONORING BOY SCOUT TROOP 95
OF NORTH COVENTRY TOWNSHIP,
CHESTER COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

HON. JIM GERLACH

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 16, 2006

Mr. GERLACH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Boy Scout Troop 95 of North Coventry Township, Chester County, Pennsylvania on the occasion of its 50th Anniversary. It is the mission of the Boy Scouts of America (BSA) to build character, foster citizenship, and develop fitness. These three aims are the bedrock of the American Scouting movement and the foundation of 50 years of scouting experience for Troop 95.

Troop 95 is a tremendous group of young men that have and continue to practice the policy of "boy-led and boy-run" in the development of teamwork, leadership skills and personal responsibility. They develop the rules and standards to meet and work together to accomplish their many goals and objectives.

The Troop is also a safe haven for young men. It seeks to create a place where everyone feels physically and emotionally secure. The scouts of Troop 95 live the Scout Oath and Law each moment of each day, to the best of their individual and combined abilities.

The Troop has also created an extremely high standard of tolerance and acceptance. Scouts communicate openly with each other and demonstrate camaraderie and friendship at all times. Troop 95 has also created an environment based on learning and fun. Scouts seek the best from each participant, and go the extra mile to help each person achieve personal success.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in congratulating the Scouts, their outstanding leaders, and scout parents of Troop 95, past and present, for the terrific contributions they have made in their community and for the positive development of the moral, physical, and emotional well-being of the young men who have participated in the Troop over the past 50 years.

IN RECOGNITION OF NOW-NYC'S
26th ANNUAL SUSAN B. ANTHONY AWARDS

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 16, 2006

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to acknowledge the achievements of NOW-NYC and the recipients of the 2006 Susan B. Anthony Awards and the Elizabeth Cady Stanton Award. Whether it's fighting against the appointment of Judge Alito, demanding an increase in the availability of Emergency Contraception or working to end the statute of limitations for rape in New York State, the members of NOW-NYC have been leaders in standing up for women's rights.

The Elizabeth Cady Stanton Award is presented to a woman of outstanding achievement who has made important contributions toward creating a more equal society and has served as a role model for other women. The Susan B. Anthony Awards honor women who have accomplished something remarkable. Each of this year's recipients has, in her own way, spoken up, spoken out, gotten involved and made a difference. They are our role models and heroines.

Councilwoman Gale Brewer, recipient of this year's Elizabeth Cady Stanton Award, is an outstanding member of the New York City Council, representing Manhattan's Upper West Side. She is a strong ally, a good friend and a champion of women's rights and human rights. Brewer has been instrumental in passing numerous laws, the most recently being the Human Rights Bill, which protects domestic partnerships from discrimination and retaliation in the workplace. In 2000, the Daily News hailed her as "One of 50 New Yorkers to Watch."

When the crime rate in their North Brooklyn neighborhood began to rise, Oraia Reid and Consuelo Ruybal started helping women take back the night by offering them a safe way home. In 2004 they founded RightRides, a not-for-profit organization that offers free late-night rides home to women in several Brooklyn neighborhoods and parts of the Lower East Side of Manhattan. Their creative response to improving women's safety so impressed Mayor Michael Bloomberg, that December 12, 2005 was named "RightRides For Women's Safety Day."

Nancy Lublin has proved that one person really can change the world. Recognizing that what you wear can make the difference between getting the job and getting shown the door, she created Dress for Success, which provides business attire for low income women who are seeking jobs. For many women, that would have been enough. But Nancy saw another need—the need to encourage kids to get involved in their communities and to recognize their achievements when they do. So she agreed to become CEO of Do Something, an organization founded in 1993 by Andrew Shue (of Melrose Place) and Michael Sanchez, childhood friends who wanted to make community service as cool as sports. Do Something has distributed over 1 million dollars through its Brick Awards to young people who are making a difference in their communities. In 1998, CNN dubbed the BRICK Awards "the Oscars for young people in service".

Former NOW-NYC President and current Chair of the Board, Jane Manning has taken her activism to the courts as well as to the streets. A graduate of Yale College and NYU Law School, Jane served as Assistant District Attorney for six years and currently defends women's rights as a human rights attorney for the non-profit organization Equality Now. A dedicated advocate for victims of domestic violence, sexual violence, and trafficking, Jane launched NOW-NYC's campaign to repeal New York's statute of limitations on rape cases and works closely with human rights groups to bring an end to the human rights epidemic of trafficking in women. Recently she represented a coalition of feminist organizations before New York State's highest court, arguing as amici curiae to reverse an appellate court decision that would have made the defense of extreme emotional disturbance almost universally available to men who kill their wives or girlfriends. In a unanimous decision, the court reversed the lower court's decision and ruled in favor of the feminist groups.

Finally, I want to congratulate Kathleen Ham, a symbol of courage to rape victims around the country. She is one of the reasons I fought so hard to pass the Debbie Smith Act. In June of 1973, Kathleen Ham was brutally attacked and raped in her New York apartment. Although the suspect was immediately apprehended while fleeing the scene, the trial resulted in a hung jury. In 2005, DNA technology linked the man charged in her rape definitively not only to her rape but also to at least 23 other rapes in Maryland and New Jersey over the past 32 years. Knowing that this serial rapist must be put behind bars, Ms. Ham courageously decided to take the stand once again, and to go public with her identity and story. When she came forward, nine other women also came forward to say that this man had raped them. Their stories are being used to illustrate the absurdity of New York's five year statute of limitations for rape.

Mr. Speaker, I request that my colleagues join me in paying tribute to the 2006 Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony Award winners.

DEERWOOD ELEMENTARY SCHOOL AND VETERANS

HON. TED POE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, March 16, 2006

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, children are never too young to understand patriotism, and be thankful for it. A group of students at Deerwood Elementary School in Kingwood, Texas, showed us that even young minds can appreciate and revere those who have fought for our great nation.

The students at Deerwood paid tribute to our veterans by making cards in honor of National Salute to Hospitalized Veterans Week. The cards thanked the veterans for keeping us safe, fighting for our freedom and other actions inherent to the United States Armed Forces.

My staff handed out the cards during a visit to the Michael E. DeBakey VA Medical Center. Upon receiving a card, many of the veterans smiled, for the first time in a long time. One veteran even said it was the first card he'd gotten in ages.

As Americans, we can learn a lot from the students at Deerwood Elementary. We, too, should always find a way to thank our brave men and women in uniform.

The exceptional actions of these students are a fitting tribute to the dedicated hard-working staff of Deerwood. It is obvious to me, that the teachers are doing a great job shaping the minds of these young Americans.

Deerwood students are proof that the outlook for our future generation is bright. If they already appreciate those who fight on the frontlines for our freedom, there is great hope for the future of this nation.

I would like to commend the students, the principal Carol Suell, and teachers at Deerwood Elementary School for a job well done.
